

Interested or interesting?

Learner workbook

Describe a feeling and what causes it.

Understand the distinction

For many pairs, the -ed adjective describes a feeling: bored, excited, interested. The -ing adjective describes what causes that feeling: boring, exciting, interesting.

People can cause feelings too. A person can be interesting, and a story can be exciting. Choose by meaning, not by whether the noun is a person or a thing. After interested in, use a noun or an -ing verb.
