Concept #24 ▶ Accusing & Blaming

I accused him of lying/cheating.
You directly told him (perhaps publicly) he was lying/cheating.

I blamed him for the accident/mistake.
You thought or claimed he was the one who caused the accident/mistake.

I shamed him for his lie/mistake.
You tried to publicly humiliate him for his lie/mistake.

He was guilty of lying/cheating.
He actually did lie or cheat.

He felt guilty of lying/cheating.
He felt the emotion of guilt for his lying/cheating.

He felt ashamed of lying/cheating.
He felt the emotion of shame for his lying/cheating.

I resented his lying to me.
You had deep bitterness about his lying to you, and could not forgive him.

I forgave him for lying to me.
You forgave him for lying, and now carry no resentment.

We use "accuse" for intentional bad behavior, but "blame" for less intentional mistakes or accidents.

If someone is accused of a crime, goes to court, and is determined to be guilty, we say they have been "found guilty".

If someone has wronged you, and you "hold it against them", you feel resentment towards them.

Suggested Lesson Flow

Warm-up

Display the concept image and ask learners to predict the rule behind Accusing & Blaming before reading the explanation.

Model

Walk through the Core Idea and the sections on Key Points, Usage Notes, Additional Examples. Pause after each part so students can restate the pattern in plain English.

Guided practice

Project two or three examples from the concept sheet and ask pairs to explain why each choice works, not just what the answer is.

Independent work

Assign the 24 practice items for quiet work, partner checking, and final feedback.

Closure

Ask students to create one new sentence or mini-example of their own that follows the same pattern.

Likely Learner Errors

- Learners may overgeneralize the first pattern they notice. Keep returning to Key Points, Usage Notes, Additional Examples and ask students to explain what changes from one example to the next.
- Long explanations can hide the signal word or structure. Have students underline the exact phrase that tells them which form, pattern, or response is needed.
- If students can choose an answer but cannot explain it, ask them to justify their choice using words taken directly from the concept sheet.

Differentiation and Delivery Notes

- Support: teach one section at a time, then send students back to the examples or the practice set so they can apply the same rule immediately.
- Pair work: let students compare answers aloud before you reveal the key. The explanation step is as important as the final answer.
- Extension: ask stronger students to write two fresh examples or a short dialogue that uses the same target language accurately.

Model Language from the Concept Sheet

- Explanation: To accuse someone means to assert that they have done something wrong, often a serious wrongdoing, and this assertion can be made publicly or privately.
- Example Sentences: "She accused her coworker of stealing her idea." "They accused the politician of corruption during the campaign." "I accused him of breaking the vase, but he denied it."
- Explanation: To blame someone means to say or think that they are responsible for something bad that happened, usually less intentional than accusing.
- Example Sentences: "He blamed his friend for the car accident." "The teacher blamed the student for the miscommunication." "I blamed my brother for spilling the juice."
- Explanation: To shame someone means to make them feel bad and humiliated about something wrong they did, often in front of others.
- Example Sentences: "The manager shamed the employee for missing the deadline." "She shamed her son for lying about his homework." "He was shamed by his peers for cheating on the test."
