Concept #06 ► Noun/Verb Confusion

Some words can function as both nouns and verbs.
Be careful how you use them in a sentence.

The noun style requires extra words on both sides.

give

make support access advise respect a visit a call contact

to

with

►►► We will

The verb style is direct and requires no extra words.

support
access advise respect
visit call

them.

Note that "to" would be incorrect here.

Core Idea

In English, some words can function as both nouns and verbs. This can sometimes be confusing, especially for non-native speakers. It's important to use these words correctly in a sentence, as their usage changes depending on whether they are acting as a noun or a verb.

Quick reference

Noun Usage

Support (noun): Correct: We need to give support to the team.
Incorrect: We need support the team.

Verb Usage

Support (verb): Correct: We will support the team. Incorrect: We will give support to the team.

Key Points

Noun Usage

When these words are used as nouns, they typically require extra words around them to make the sentence grammatically correct. Here are some examples:

- Support (noun): Correct: We need to give support to the team. Incorrect: We need support the team.
- Access (noun): Correct: We need to make access to the database. Incorrect: We need access the database.
- Advice (noun): Correct: She gave advice to her friend. Incorrect: She gave her friend advice.
- Respect (noun): Correct: He has a lot of respect for his mentor. Incorrect: He has respect his mentor.
- Visit (noun): Correct: They made a visit to the museum. Incorrect: They visited the museum.
- Call (noun): Correct: We need to make a call to the client. Incorrect: We need call the client.
- Contact (noun): Correct: She made contact with the author. Incorrect: She contacted the author.

Verb Usage

When these words are used as verbs, they are more direct and do not need extra words. Here are some examples:

- Support (verb): Correct: We will support the team. Incorrect: We will give support to the team.
- Access (verb): Correct: You can access the database. Incorrect: You can make access to the database.
- Advise (verb): Correct: She will advise her friend. Incorrect: She will give advice to her friend.
- Respect (verb): Correct: He respects his mentor. Incorrect: He has respect for his mentor.

- Visit (verb): Correct: They will visit the museum. Incorrect: They will make a visit to the museum.
- Call (verb): Correct: We need to call the client. Incorrect: We need to make a call to the client.
- Contact (verb): Correct: She will contact the author. Incorrect: She will make contact with the author.

Summary

The key difference is that noun forms often require additional words (e.g., "give support to," "make access to"), while verb forms are more straightforward and do not need those additional words (e.g., "support," "access"). Remembering this can help avoid common mistakes and make your English more fluent and natural.

Practice Sentences

Try using these words correctly in sentences:

- We need to __ (give support / support) the new project.
- Can you __ (make access / access) the files for me?
- She always __ (gives advice / advises) wisely. He __ (has respect for / respects) his parents deeply. They are planning to __ (make a visit / visit) the ancient ruins. I need to __ (make a call / call) my supervisor. Please __ (make contact / contact) me if you need any help.

By practicing these examples and understanding the difference, you will improve your accuracy and confidence in using English correctly.
