Concept #40 ▶ So | Such

We often use "so" or "such" to refer to a quantity or degree that causes something. But these two words are used differently.

{ "so" + adjective + Ø } { "such" + article + adjective + noun }

- The flight was so long (that) I fell asleep.
 - The flight was such a long trip (that) I fell asleep.
- My cat is so fun (that) I'm never bored.
 - I've such a fun cat (that) I'm never bored.
- Tokyo is so large (that) I always get lost.
 - Tokyo is such a large city (that) I always get lost.
- John worked so hard (that) he got a raise.
 - John was such a hard worker (that) he got a raise.
- The joke was so funny (that) I laughed loudly.
 - It was such a funny joke (that) I laughed loudly.

Note: The word "that" is optional in all ten of these sentences.
Note: Articles are not needed with plural nouns such as in "such fun cats".

Core Idea

Understanding the correct use of "so" and "such" is crucial in achieving fluency in English. These two words are used to emphasize the extent or degree of something, but they differ significantly in their grammatical usage and the type of emphasis they provide.

Quick reference

1. The Use of "So"

"So" + adjective: When "so" is used with an adjective, it emphasizes the degree of the quality described by the adjective. The result is often described in a following clause. Example: "The flight was so long (that) I fell asleep." Here, "so long" stresses the length of the flight, with the outcome that the speaker fell asleep due to the prolonged duration.

1. The Use of "So"

"The weather was so cold (that) the lake froze overnight."

2. The Use of "Such"

"Such" + article + adjective + noun: When "such" is used, it intensifies the entire noun phrase. This construction is used to emphasize the exceptional nature of the noun described by the adjective. Example: "It was such a long trip (that) I fell asleep." "Such a long trip" underscores the unusual length of the trip, leading to the result that the speaker fell asleep.

2. The Use of "Such"

"She has such a lovely voice (that) everyone stops to listen."

2. The Use of "Such"

Example: "They are such good friends (that) they spend every day together."

2. The Use of "Such"

Example: "It was such bad weather (that) the event was canceled."

Key Points

1. The Use of "So"

"So" is primarily used as an intensifier that precedes an adjective or an adverb. The structure to follow is:

Structure: "so" + adjective/adverb + (that) + clause

Explanation:

- "So" + adjective: When "so" is used with an adjective, it emphasizes the degree of the quality described by the adjective. The result is often described in a following clause. Example: "The flight was so long (that) I fell asleep." Here, "so long" stresses the length of the flight, with the outcome that the speaker fell asleep due to the prolonged duration.
- "So" + adverb: When "so" is used with an adverb, it intensifies the manner in which an action is performed, again with the resulting consequence often in a subsequent clause. Example: "He drove so quickly (that) we arrived ahead of schedule." In this case, "so quickly" emphasizes the speed at which the driving occurred, leading to the result of an early arrival.

Further Examples:

- "The weather was so cold (that) the lake froze overnight."
- "She speaks so softly (that) I can barely hear her."
- "He ran so fast (that) he won the race by a large margin."

Important Note: The word "that" in these constructions is often optional, particularly in informal speech. However, its inclusion makes the cause-and-effect relationship explicit.

2. The Use of "Such"

"Such" is used to emphasize a noun or a noun phrase, which typically includes an adjective. The structure is:

Structure: "such" + article + adjective + noun + (that) + clause

Explanation:

- "Such" + article + adjective + noun: When "such" is used, it intensifies the entire noun phrase. This construction is used to emphasize the exceptional nature of the noun described by the adjective. Example: "It was such a long trip (that) I fell asleep." "Such a long trip" underscores the unusual length of the trip, leading to the result that the speaker fell asleep.

Further Examples:

- "She has such a lovely voice (that) everyone stops to listen."
- "They live in such a quiet neighborhood (that) you can hear the birds chirping."
- "He faced such a difficult challenge (that) he needed extra help."

Use with Plural Nouns: When using "such" with plural nouns, the article is omitted.

- Example: "They are such good friends (that) they spend every day together."

Important Note: "Such" can be followed by an uncountable noun without an article, but this usage is less common and more advanced.

- Example: "It was such bad weather (that) the event was canceled."

3. Key Differences Between "So" and "Such"

To ensure precise and effective use of "so" and "such," it is essential to recognize the fundamental differences in their usage:

- Type of Word They Modify: "So" modifies adjectives or adverbs. It intensifies the quality or manner described. "Such" modifies nouns or noun phrases. It emphasizes the overall nature or essence of the noun.
- Examples: "So" + Adjective/Adverb: "The room was so clean (that) you could eat off the floor." "She smiled so warmly (that) everyone felt welcome." "Such" + Noun Phrase: "It was such a clean room (that) you could eat off the floor." "She has such a warm smile (that) everyone felt welcome."
- Result Clauses: Both "so" and "such" constructions often lead to a result clause introduced by "that." The word "that" clarifies the effect or outcome of the emphasized condition.

4. Common Pitfalls and Correct Usage

It is common for non-native speakers to mistakenly interchange "so" and "such." The key to avoiding these errors is to focus on whether the sentence emphasizes an adjective/adverb or a noun phrase.

Common Mistakes:

- Incorrect: "It was so a long trip (that) I fell asleep." Correct: "It was such a long trip (that) I fell asleep."
- Incorrect: "The cake was such delicious (that) everyone ate it." Correct: "The cake was so delicious (that) everyone ate it."

Guidelines to Avoid Mistakes:

- Use "so" with adjectives/adverbs: "She was so happy (that) she couldn't stop smiling."
- Use "such" with noun phrases: "It was such a happy moment (that) everyone celebrated."

5. Advanced Examples for Practice

For learners who are comfortable with the basic structures, here are some more complex examples that illustrate the use of "so" and "such."

- With "So": "The lecture was so intriguing (that) the audience remained silent throughout." "He reacted so calmly (that) no one realized how serious the situation was."
- With "Such": "It was such a riveting lecture (that) the audience remained silent throughout." "They are such dedicated volunteers (that) they work on weekends without complaint."

By rigorously practicing the use of "so" and "such" in various sentence structures, learners can significantly improve their ability to express emphasis in English. Understanding the nuances of these words will not only make your language more accurate but also more expressive and effective.
